As the thick forest through
Muggins—as usual—"blue."
Heat homeward, "tacking" left and right;
When all at once he "brought up" right
Against an old dead rew.
At which he "counded to."
And "squaring off" as if to fight,
Said, with an eath I shan't indite,
"——infernal secundrelyon!
Light—an' I'll tick you, black or white!"
Just then above him flew
An owl, which on a branch did light
A few feet o'er the boosy wight,
And then commenced, "Tu-whoo—
Tu-whoo—tu-whoo—u-whoo!"

And then commenced, "Tu-whooTu-whoo-tu-whoo-tu-whoo!"
Quote Muggins, "Don't you think to fright
A fellow of my weight and height
With your Ter whoo-ter whoo.
You carsed bugahoo!
An'if you're Beelzehub, its quite
On-necesary you should light—
For Muggins ain't your "due;"
For money matters are all right."
The Frinter's paid up—honorbright"
Thereat the owl withdrew;
And Muggins missied too.
But there are other chaps who might
He caught out late some dismal night,
Who haven't paid schaf's due!
They know—to scha—to take.

LAWRENCE, K. T.

Saturday Morning, June 25, 1859.

The heads of Indians arrows, spears, javelins, &c., often found in many parts of our continent, have been admired, but the process of formation conjectured. The Hon, Caleb Lyon, on a recent visit to California, met with a party of Shasta Indians and ascertained that they still used those weapons, which, in most tribes, have been superseded by rifles, or at least by iron pointed arrows and spears. He found a man who could manufacture them, and saw him at work at all parts of the process. The description which Lyon wrote and communicated to the American Ethnological Society, through Dr. E. H. Davis, we copy below:

The Shasta Indian seated himself upon the floor and laying the stone anvil upon his knee, which was of compact talcos slate, with one blow of his agate chisel he separated the obsidian pebble into two parts, then giving another blow to the fractured side, he split off a slab some fourth of an inch in thickness. Holding the piece against the anvil with the thum! and finger of his left hand he commenced a series of continuous blows, every one of Dec. 19, 57, a series of continuous blows, every one of which clipped off fragments of the brit the substance. It gradually assumed the required shape. After finishing the base Pike's Peak Outfits. of the arrow head (the whole being only little over an inch in length,) he began striking gentler blows, every one of which I expected would break it into pieces .-Yet such was their adroit application, his skill and dexterity, that in little over an Also dealers in hour he produced a perfect obsidian arrow head. I thee requested him to carve me one from the remains of a broken porter bottle, which (after two failures) he succeeded in doing. He gave as a reason for his ill success, he did not understand the grain of the glass. No sculptor ever handled a chisel with greater precision, or more carefully measured the weight and effect of every blow, than this ingenious Indian, for, even among them, arrow

He enderstood the capacity of the material he wrought, and before striking the first blow, by surveying the pebble, he could judge of its availability as well as the sculptor judges of the perfectness of a block of Parian. In a moment, all that I had read upon this subject, written by learned and speculative antiquarians of the hardening of copper for the working of flint axes, spears, chisels and arrow heads, vanished before the simplest mechanical process. I felt which many attempt, but in which few truth of the following: One day last week, as the eastward bound express train reached Laporte, Ind., Foreign and Domestic Liquors, a passenger stepped off while the engine was being replenished with wood and water, and walked back and forth on the water, and walked back and forth on the platform, and continued to walk until the whistle sounded. The other passengers got on board and the train passed off, but the gentleman still walked on. A few March 19, '59-3m. minutes after the train had gone, a station man saw the pedestrian, and going up to him, asked, in a surprised tone: im, asked, in a surprised tone:

The section master had an effice near by, and the two went to find that official and to procure an engine. The traveler stated his case—he must go on—could not delay—and offered the officer $250 if he would put him on board the train. This strange demand and strange offer caused the station master to hasten to do what he could. The fire was not out in the engine that had drawn the train to that point—the bargain was settled—a draft given on New York for the $250, draft given on New York for the $250. and in ten minutes the traveler started with an engine to overtake the flying express. In order to prevent mistakes, we cut our seions

Our trees have been raised on Kansas soil, and are therefore much preferable to those from out learned by our own experience.
